DEMOCRACY

The Democratic Party is not an aggregation of citizens who have gotten together for the purpose of running the State for what there is in it. It is composed of a body of men of the same type who endured the hardships and dangers of bloody warfare for four years, who after the termination of those hostilities, shelved their pet party creeds and united for the redemption of the State from the control of exploiters and for the constructive upbuilding of the devasted Commonwealth. From time to time shrewd leaders who have had a thirst for office or selfish ambitions to gratify have performed various political manœuvers in the formation of new parties, and independent movements, in an effort to get into power and control of the State. The same conditions have prevailed in other Southern States. Many efforts have been made and various artful tactics employed to break the "solid South." A gigantic effort of this sort was attempted in Virginia two years ago. But very few were fooled. The "solid South" is still solid and is likely to remain so until there is a complete change in populations and conditions. That those who have been in control of this State have been actuated by patriotism and guided by wisdom in the administration of our affairs is best attested by the condition of the State to-day as compared with its condition when the government was wrested from the hands of exploiters and adventurers. Nobody but the demagogue contends that office holding in this State is attractive from the standpoint of emolument. Our officers as a rule are patriotic men who are interested in performing a patriotic service with little thought of salary. The few better paying offices in the more favored counties, the same thing has been true of our local county governments. We do not claim that Democratic administration has been perfect. Mistakes have been made, and we can look back and see these mistakes which would not have been made if the foresight had been as good as the hindsight. We believe it can be truthfully said, however, that we have always tried to profit by the knowledge of those mistakes as time has passed.

There are always present with us persons known as "kickers." We are having elections all over Virginia for filling the various county and legislative offices, and the kicker is in evidence as usual. He has a magnifying glass going around pointing out and laying stress on every imperfection it is possible for him to discover. Also there are prejudices and personal animosities which rise up on such occasions and loom large before the voter. The day of settling scores has arrived, and some people think at the ballot box is the place to do it. We also have a small class of very good citizens who claim to be Republicans in national politics and Democrats in local politics which after all, is a tribute to the excellence of Virginia democracy. These good fellows can see no reason why they can not, with perfect consistency, affiliate with national Republicans and local Democrats, with all the privileges of party affiliation in both parties. If they are told that they are not eligible to a Democratic Primary, they sometimes take is as a personal affront.

What are the voters going to do in the coming primary and the general election in the fall? Are they going to be swayed by the appeals of the fault-finders and strike blindly at those who have been charged with the administration of their affairs by putting the fault-finders in charge as a remedy? Upon serious consideration of all the qualities and qualifications of the men, and the things for which they stand, should we expect any great improvement by such a course? Admitting that all the candidates are men of honesty and capability, what importance should be attached to training and experience? Do we fill our offices for the purpose of giving a friend a job, or for the purpose of obtaining efficient service from public servants? Would we rather the public would have poor service than to see a man we do not personally like and we feel sure would make an efficient officer elected?

And then, we are going to have a primary. It is going to be a Democratic Primary. The Democratic party organization is going to thin out its candidates down to one nominee for each office, in case there may be party opposition and present a solid party front in support of its choice for each of the offices. We have government by parties in this country, and this is the way we do it. We unite upon men and we unite upon measures. This makes it possible to do things and avoid interminable dead-locks caused by unwarranted independence of thought and action.

Mr. Voter, to which party do you belong—we do not mean whether you are a Jones man or a Smith man—but to what party do you belong? Through which of the great parties are you proposing to do things? Are you a Democrat or a Republican? You can not be both. No man can serve two masters, the Good Book tells us. Neither do we think there is any better chance of being loyal to two parties. There are general elections where a man may vote and no questions will be asked about his politics. It is in these elections that the inter-party contests are settled between their respective nominees. But in a party primary they have a right to question and to know our politics. What have you been doing? By their fruits shall ye know them. Have you been sticking to your party, or have you been doing as you please in voting for or against the party nominees?

We are raising these questions because it is timely to do so. We take it that the great majority of the voters are honest and we do not want to do anything that is not right and proper. Interested persons will be inclined to persuade voters who are not eligible in a Democratic Primary to vote in the primary. The judges and the voters themselves will have to decide the question. It is a question that the voter himself should decide if he is sufficiently informed to do so. If not the judges will have to decide for him. It is a matter of honest intent and consistent performance. There ought to be no more trouble in determining a person's politics than it is to determine his religious affiliation. A man is either in one church or another, or in no church. He is never in two churches. Non-members do not participate in church government.

The Democratic Party is always glad to receive additions to the party ranks when they come in good faith. But it also has the right to require that Democrats be in good and regular standing in order to partake of its privileges.

Every consistent Democrat has a right to feel a pride in his party and its splendid record in this State. And every such Democrat should take a pride in going to his party primary and voting for his choice of candidates. In the fall election as a bounden duty he should go to the polls and vote for the nominees, all nominees, of his party. Those who have not been Democrats heretofore, and who have decided that it is wise to become Democrats may easily establish their identity as such by supporting the Democratic nominees in the regular elections. One or two straight votes will usually satisfy the party authorities of good faith. It is entirely possible for a few of those who have no politics or are Republicans to insinuate themselves into the Democratic Primary by deception. But no self-respecting person will practice such a deception for such a privilege, or for a favorite candidate.

WHO PAYS THE BILL?

The fellow who pays the advertising bill is the fellow who doesn't advertise. He pays as surely and certainly as if he went to his cash-drawer and took the money out. The only difference is that his customers' dollars, instead of getting into his cash-drawer, pass right by him and enter the cash drawer of the advertiser. He is paying for the other fellow's advertising but is not being benefitted by it. Many non-advertisers have often wondered who pays the large advertising bills of their competitors, not realizing that they themselves are paying most dearly for it.

Why not stop paying the advertising bill of your competitor and let some other fellow start paying for your advertising through the loss of business? Pull the customers' dollar into your store with advertising. For advertising is like a magnet—the stronger it is, the harder it pulls.

REMEMBER THIS

We've always contended, and we're going to keep right on contending, that the people who live out in the county have just as much right to come into Appomattox and enter your yard and break down your flowers and fences as you have to drive out to their homes and commit simlar depredations. If a stranger stopped his auto in front of your home and climbed the fence and broke off a limb of a favorite tree, or snapped off a handful of your prettiest flowers you couldn't get hold of an officer quick enough. And you'd prosecute him to the last ditch.

That is as true as gospel. And yet in the face of if we hear frequent reports of someone from town stopping in the rural districts to break off limbs of trees, to break or dig up shrubbery or, as has been the case more than once, to enter some farm yard and carry away choice flowers. And just where there is any difference between town or country desecration of property, or just plain down-right stealing if you want the real definition we are unable to determine. We can't draw a line between the two, because it is just as criminal, just as despicable,in one case as it is in the other.

It wouldn't be a bad idea if everyone would pause just for a second and pledge himself or herself to treat other people's property just as they wish their own to be treated. We would have a better community, and a good deal prettier one, to say nothing of better and more pleasant relations between town and rural citizens. If you live in the town your property is your own and no one has any right to deface or destroy it. If you live in the country, the same thing is true. So try and be a better citizen by remembering this next time you see something you want that belongs to someone else.

Conference of Savings Leaders at Washington; Sale of Treasury Savings Certificates to Go On

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(Special.)—That the sale of Treasury Savings Certificates has become a permanent part of the financing program of the United States government was divulged at a meeting just held in Washington, which was attended by the Savings Directors from the 12 Federal Reserve Districts of the United States, when plans were made for continuing the sale of these securities for years to come.

Law Wallace, Jr., National Director of Savings, urged the district directors to go back home and exert every influence and effort to increase the sale of Government Savings Securities in order to minimize the loss from worthless investments. Mr. Wallace told the directors that there were many "land pirates" these days—"the pirates of finance." He declared that there were thousands of smooth-talking stock salesmen—full of glib promises—who are hard after the savings of the people in exchange for their get-rich-quick investments. "Go back home and tell your people to beware of the wildcat stock salesman. He is more dangerous than the old-time pirate of the high seas ever thought of being."

The government is particularly desirous of helping the people of this country to spend wisely, save systematically, and invest safely. In order that savings for safe investment may be opened up, particularly for small investors—to whom safety is the first consideration, Treasury Savings Certificates are offered, yielding about 4 per cent per annum, compounded semi-annually, and maturing five years from date of issue, or which may be redeemed at option prior to that date at values increasing every month. These certificates are issued in denominations of $25, $100 and $1,000, and may be purchased at a discount price of $20.59, $82 and $820, respectively. They will not fluctuate in market value, they are always worth more than they cost, they are easily convertible into cash, and they are absolutely safe. These securities can be purchased through your local postmaster or from the Federal Reserve Bank at Richmond, Va.

HEADLIGHT LAW EFFECTIVE SOON

All Virginia Motorists Must Do Away With Plain Lenses.

OPERATIVE ON JUNE 27TH

Motor Vehicle Commissioners Give Lists of the "Legal Lights."

(By CARTER W. WORMELY)

Richmond, May 30. Special to The Times-Virginian)—J. M. Hayes, Chief Clerk in the State Automobile Licenses Department of Virginia, directs attention of automobile, truck and motorcycle owners to laws regulating lights on motor driven vehicles. The amendment and reenactment of Section No. 2412, Code of Virginia, providing for the use of lenses, or non-glare devices in all headlights, was approved on March 29, 1923, and will become operative on June 27, of this year.

What Law Requires

The above law requires that no motor driven vehicle shall, whether in use or not in use, be equipped with lamps having a plain glass. It also provides that it shall be unlawful for anyone to use, sell or have in his or her possession any headlight, or other lighting device, designed for use in this State, which has not been approved in accordance with the law.

The law provides that all makers of lighting devices submit samples for test and approval to the Secretary of the Commonwealth and that the Secretary issue certificate of approval covering those devices which conform to the requirements of the statue.

A list of electric headlighting devices was approved at a conference of Motor Vehicle Administrators which assembled April 27, 1923, at Hartford, Connecticut. State reps. ... sented at this conference were: Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Vermont, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maine, Rhode Island and New Hampshire.

Lighting devices adopted at this conference have been approved for universal use in the States named. This makes it possible for the owner of an automobile in the State of Maryland to drive his car through to Maine without being molested on account of conflicting State headlighting laws. There is a convenient ... on foot, which is being fostered by the Bureau of Standards at Washington, and the States mentioned to have ... national lighting laws adopted that are uniform, which would prove of very great assistance to motorists in general.

Legal Lenses

The following lighting devices have been adopted by motor vehicle commissioners, representing the ten States mentioned Automobile sizes—Alphco, (8 1-8 inches only); Bausch and Lomb, Benzer, Type A; Conaphore, Type F.) clear and amber colored; D. B. (Dodge Brothers, (8 5-8 inches only); Dillon Type I; Flintex, Ford H, (8 1-8 inches only); Guide Ray, Type A, (Headlamps); Holophane, No Tilt; Hudson, (8 1-8 inches only); Lee Knight, Legalite, M III; Liberty, Liberty, Type D; Miro-Tilt, headlamp, (Wills St. Clair); Monogram; Osgood B 23; Patterson, Pharah-O-Lite, Type FW; Smith. The Monogram light was adopted for all motorcycle sizes.

The present lighting laws of Virginia was passed by the last General Assembly by a large majority (65 to 5), the first intent being to make highways safe for the use of all motorists. Checking stations are to be established in various centers throughout the State, where motorists can have lights properly focused and adjusted to meet requirements of the law, which are to be rigidly enforced.

It is the intention of the Virginia State officials have their list of lighting devices approvals conform as nearly as possible with the requirements of the law in the ten eastern States enumerated, so that Virginia motorists can drive during the summer months through a large number of northern States without unnecessary molestation.

New York Makes Bid For Democratic Meet

Washington, May 30.—Norman E. Mack, of New York, gave notice of a meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee here that New York would make a determined bid for the next national convention of the party. Other cities seeking the convention were reported as Cleveland, Denver and San Francisco.

Chairman Hull called the executive committee into session to go over committee affairs before the summer holidays set in and the committee members leave on vacation trips. No important political developments came from the meeting it was said.

In addition to Chairman Hull and Mr. Mack, the meeting was attended by Mrs. G. M. Pattengall, Maine; John A. Barsett, Colorado; Clark Howell, Georgia, G. A. Connally, Michigan; Mrs. D. A. McDougal, Oklahoma; Miss George White, Ohio.

True friendship is valuable in proportion to the quality of your appreciation.

BRANCH BANKS UNDER BAN AT STATE MEETING

Virginia Association Indorses Co-Operative Marketing Of Farm Produce.

HIGHWAY QUESTION IS TO BE STUDIED

Convention Refuses to Go On Record As to Bonds or the Pay-As-You-Go Plan.

Richmond, May 30.—Resolutions disapproving the establishment of branch banks by national and State banks and indorsing the general principles of co-operative marketing of farm products as "economically sound and morally right" were tabled by the Virginia Bankers Association at the closing of its thirtieth annual convention here.

To Study Highway Problems

The association declined to indorse either of the bond issues of pay-as-you-go plans of financing of the construction of State highways, but on motion of Thomas B McAdams, seconded by Giles H. Miller, of Lynchburg, the president was instructed to appoint a committee to study the highway problem throughly and collect data showing the actual funds available for road work for the eight year period beginning January 1, next.

The committee was instructed to complete its work and report its findings to the people of the State before the November elections.

In offering his motion, which was made while the report of the roads committees was under consideration, Mr. McAdams said apparently it was impossible to ascertain the amount of money actually available for road work. He expressed the opinion that it would be an unfortunate thing for the association to indorse any particular plan for building highways but added that he thought the Bankers could render service to the State by assembly accurate figures for the information of the voters.

Expect Court Opinion

In tabling the resolution regarding branch banks, the association took the position that an early opinion may be expected from the Supreme Court and in the meantime no action of any sort should be taken. Members of the association who expressed themselves on the co-operative marketing resolution took the view that the bankers of the State had not had sufficiently time to study the matter carefully

BRAVE DEPUTY SHERIFF TO GET CARNEGIE MEDAL

Luray, May 30.—For his bravery and humanity to a prisoner in his custody, Deputy Sheriff William E. Lucas of Rockingham County is to receive a Carnegie hero medal, in addition to numerous and substantial monetary considerations, according to messages received here.

Several days ago Lucas, in company with Denny Shifflett, an alleged moonshiner of Rockingham county, was on their way to the Harrisonburg jail where Shifflett was to be confined for transporting liquor in his car, having a short time before been arrested by ... in the Elkton section of Rockingham.

The officer allowed Shifflett to drive the car while he remained in the rear in charge of the liquor.

Passing on to the bridge across the Shenandoah river, near Elkton, Shifflett is said to have deliberately driven the car over a 40-foot embankment, hurling himself and the officer into the river, where they were pinned down under the heavy machine.

Both suffered severe injuries; Shifflett's skull was fractured and Lucas' leg was broken.

Shifflett was pinned under the car, with his head under water. Groping around in the darkness—the accident occurred just before daylight—Lucas managed to get his prisoner by the head which he pulled out of the water and held it there until help arrived.

ORDER CESSATION OF IRISH BATTLES

"Republic Can No Langer Be Successfully by Your Arms."

NO FORMAL SURRENDER

Definite Abandonment of State of War Expected to Be Embarrassing.

Dublin, May 30.—Captured documents made public by the free State government show that Eamon De Valera and his chief of staff Frank Aitken, have definitely ordered a cessation of active hostilities by the Republicans, adding that the "republic can no longer be defended successfully by your arms."

The statement emanating from De Valera comes as a quick change of attitude on the part of the republican leader and is regarded in free State quarters as proving the effectiveness of the government's campaign. Scarcely more than a week ago, in a communication sent out he declared that the "one-sided truce" could not continue indefinitely, but this brought no response from the government and the document now made public shows he has brought the fighting to a definite end.

No Formal Surrender

There will be no formal surrender of arms, but the order by Aitken that they shall be dumped, is almost equivalent for arms dumps are easily discovered by the free State patrols. It is believed the republicans are now likely to concentrate their efforts upon the election campaign, believing that their chances of influencing the voters are greater with the cessation of the armed campaigns and attacks on property.

Definite abandonment of the state of war is expected to prove embarrassing to the government, whose imprisonment and military measures have up to this time been legally justified by the decision of the courts that they were necessary to the campaign against the Irregulars.

No immediate large release of prisoners, however, are probable.

WEATHER HOLDING BACK PLANTING OF TOBACCO IN STATE.

Danville, May 30.—Tobacco planting throughout this section is the latest known in years on account of the continuation of cold nights, which has stunted the growth of the plants. Farmers are so short of plants that ... are sending to points as far distant as Pittsylvania County and ordering them from South Carolina. The Petersburg Chamber of Commerce has sent an appeal for plants to Warrenton, N. C., while one man in this vicinity has been offered as much as $1,000 cash for one of his beds of plants.

Usually at spring time there is a good deal of talk about the shortage of plants, and this year when the crop was raised little or no attention was paid to it. Now, however, it is generally realized that the situation is little short of alarming, with a much smaller crop of tobacco expected than was anticipated, also one of the latest.

Deutschland Is Again Discussed

Baltimore, May 30.—Duty due the government on the cargo of dye stuffs brought to America by the German submarine Deutchland in the first under sea trans-Atlantic voyage was the subject of arbitration before United States Circuit Judge Rose.

The United States Treasury is seeking $40,000 said by the government to be due on the cargo, while A. Schumacher and Company, consignees of the cargo admit $10,000 is due. No suit has been filed, because the dye stuffs were imorted when the Deutchland reached Baltimore, January 10, 1916, and the statue of limitations applies.

District Attorney Woodcock, conducting the government's side of the proceedings, said the dye stuffs cost $332,000 when bought in Germany. The freight charges on the cargo, Mr. Woodcock said, were $998,000. The government contends that a part of this sum really was part of the purchase of the price for the dye stuffs and should be included in the duty charges.

Counsel for Schumacher and Company contends that duty should be assessed only on the basis of $332,000.

Henry and Paul Hilken, owners of A. Schumacher and Company agreed to arbitrate the dispute after it became clear that the statute of limitation prevented the bringing of suit.

They will not be expected to perform any duties which may be beyond their pyhsical strength.
